Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Record, Vol. 51: Hampden-Sydney College; Spring 1974 Watching Ms. Whitman in the classroom (which doesn't really feel like a classroom) is an exciting lesson no, not a lesson, that word is too formal, too conservative, too orthodox for such a refreshing experience. The quietness and gentleness of this woman is mixed with a very certain strength as she discusses putting one's feelings and emotions into a form a communicative form called poetry. Words are important to her. Each word of a student's poem is handled carefully as she takes an in and gently places it on the next line; as she rolls off her lips the words his scorched, crumpled wings to hear if the sounds are really working for the poet. The student poets range in age from 20 to 70, and together they have eaten apples, and together they have described the crisp, tart, tempting, teasing fruit in their poems. Together they have studied their own faces in mirrors. Together they have walked barefoot on the campus lawn. Together they have shared memories of their childhood. Together they have discussed their love for their fathers. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
